

We in New Jersey have , in the past, been bombarded with unwanted telephone solicitations. Many of the callers are rude/pushy and are a disruption to our privacy. A number of them call on Saturday mornings and think nothing of disrupting someone's sleep. The Do Not Call List has provided welcome relief in this area and should not be weakened or eliminated. To the contrary, we should look for ways to make it even tougher; i.e.; fines for companies/so'called charities who continually badger us with calls.
